

This contribution is about a Water Cherenkov detector which is part of the LAGO collaboration. It was installed in the Argentinean Antarctic Marambio base in 2019. The main scientific aim is to study Space Weather events in high latitudes. We present the first two years observations, the calibration and atmospheric effects.